

Please do not allow cell phone use on aircrafts, except for emergency situations, such as occurred on 9/11/2001. Flying is unpleasant and noisy enough without allowing everyone to shout over cell phones for the entire flight. Having shared a row with someone using the inflight phone service, I can tell you it is extremely annoying to have to listen to others conversations in such close quarters. That was almost 10 years ago and I can still recall gist the conversation, but have no idea what book I was trying to read at the time! Using laptop computers to check e-mail, view DVDs (with headsets), etc. should be allowed, but not cell phones. The FAA also has voiced continuing safety concerns.
